THIRTY-FOURTH DIVISION TO HOLD FIRST REUNION

"Sandstorm" Men to Assemble at Omaha During Ak-Sar-Ben Week For Grand Celebration.

When the National Guard of Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, and South Dakota were assembled to participate in the late World War, quite a large number of the units were assigned to the 34th Division. This body of men received their training at Camp Cody, Deming, New Mexico, where they were called the Sandstorm Division, principally on account of the location of the training camp.

After their training was completed, the Division was broken up and used for replacements in other Divisions. Some of these men were sent to France, others were left in this country, so it is safe to say that there are a lot of the old original Division who have not seen their training buddies since the days of Camp Cody. On September 19-20-21st the 34th Division will hold its first reunion since the World War at Omaha, Nebraska, and it will be a welcome opportunity for a large number of the boys to renew old comradeships and swap stories of their experiences. The dates fortunately come during the celebration of the Ak-Sar-Ben Fall Festival, September 20th being the date of the Daylight Floral Parade, in which in all probability the Sandstorm men will participate. The night of September 21st is the famous Ak-Sar-Ben Electrical Pageant which is so well known in this community. In addition to this the reunion itself will provide other forms of entertainment so it promises to be three full days.

General Geo. H. Harris and General John A. Johnston, at different times divisional commanders of this Division, have signified their intention to attend the reunion.

Free billeting will be provided for the men who care to take advantage of it. All that is necessary for them to bring is blankets and there will be ample room for every one. Those wishing to reserve rooms either at hotels or private homes will be supplied at moderate prices. Free rooming bureaus have been established throughout the city so that the crowds will be well taken care of. The committee in charge of the reunion has been assured of one and one-half fare for round trip rates on all railroads for ex-service men of the 34th Division and their dependent families.

Fully 10,000 who were at one time or another associated with the 34th Division are expected to attend.

It seldom pays to keep hens after they are two and a half years old, says an authority on poultry raising. This may not be true of all Leghorns, but it is generally the case in most of the other breeds. Hens older than this may return some profit but the younger hens will return greater profit. The County Agent will supply free information on culling out the non-layers.

American cheese is such a good, rich and palatable food that no home should be without it, especially when it is considered that it can be made almost as easily as butter. The United States department of Agriculture recently issued a farmers' bulletin giving directions for making this cheese. With a milk supply on every farm there is no good reason why every farmer should not have this food on his table. Ask any agricultural extension agent or write the College of Agriculture for farmers' bulletin 1191.

Girls interested in continuing their education should examine a recent bulletin about the home economics courses offered by the Nebraska College of Agriculture. No more interesting and profitable field for women exists than that of home economics. Those who wish to follow professional work for a time, will find positions waiting for them upon completing their college course. In addition, this training will be invaluable when they enter a home of their own. This state school offers attractive courses, and any girl at all interested in higher education should obtain one of these bulletins, which the college will send upon request.

The spirit of co-operation that is shown by the women in making of the paper dress forms is proof that extension work can be carried out most successfully where the women who have learned are willing to teach others.

There will be a demonstration on the making of dress forms at the home of Mrs. S. A. Stinson Wednesday, August 21, at 1:30 p. m.

The girls in the Sewing Clubs are trying to finish their garments for a making contest the last of the month. This contest is held for the purpose of choosing the pieces to be exhibited Achievement Day and also at the State fair.

Fall Pigs to Eat the Corn

On account of the relatively high price of hogs, many farmers have planned to produce fall litters of pigs, instead of fattening their brood sows for the market, according to the State college of agriculture. The ratio between the prices of hogs and corn makes this a commendable practice. With corn at present prices, 8 or 9-cent hogs should return liberal profits, and farmers who raised a good spring pig crop should consider themselves fortunate. With another big corn crop practically assured, the production of fall pigs has been encouraged. While hogs may not hold their present high market position, it would take a material drop in prices to make feeding unprofitable at present corn values. Men who have gone through similar periods of depression in years past say that once again hogs have come to the rescue of the farmer. Times and again hogs have "rooted" the farmer out of distress, and there is every reason to believe they will do it again. An abundance of corn plus good pork prices bid fair to hold up the morale of the farmer, provide him with money to pay his interest and taxes, and encourage him to stand ready for another year.

Notice is hereby given that hereafter no dumping of refuse or garbage on the river front will be allowed, under penalty of prosecution. By order of the Village Board. WM. BIERMANN, Chairman Board of Trustees.

Possible to Poison Ants

It is possible to poison house ants, a very troublesome pest about this time of the year, according to college of agriculture circular 1106 called "Control Methods for Household Pests." It is not advisable, however, to use poison where there are children, and the use of cyanide potassium, corrosive sublimate and other violent poisons should always be avoided. A slow-acting ant poison is made by dissolving one pound of sugar in a cup of hot water to which is added about one-twentieth of an ounce of sodium arsenate or one-fifth of an ounce of common white arsenic (arsenic trioxide) previously dissolved in a little hot water. Small sponges are soaked in this sirup and placed in jelly glasses, the lids of which have been punctured with large holes. The sponge should about half fill the glass. Several glasses should be prepared in this way and placed where the ants are foraging. When the pests stop visiting a glass of this poisoned sirup it should be moved a short distance, where it will be visited again. The ants will carry the poison to their nest and poison the "queen" and home ants.

Many to Sow Improved Wheats

Many farmers, attracted by their higher yielding quality, are arranging to sow Kanred and other improved strains of wheat this fall. Complaints regarding the milling qualities of these improved strains have little or no foundation. The same complaints were heard when Turkey Red wheat was introduced. There is no way to identify Kanred wheat after it is threshed. The only certain means of identification is by the rust test while it is standing in the field, Kanred being immune to certain strains of black rust. Experiments conducted in Kansas, the home of Kanred, show no more variation in the milling qualities of this wheat than in the milling qualities of other strains grown under similar conditions. The Nebraska College of Agriculture has issued a circular setting forth what the Kansas Crop Improvement association has to say about Kanred. Those interested should ask their agricultural agent or write the College for Extension Circular 112.

The heavens will be lighted up like a war front when the mammoth fireworks display is staged in connection with the night show of the coming Nebraska "Progressive" State Fair, Lincoln, September 4th to 9th.

"As a result of the war, many new and weird color schemes have been introduced by fireworks manufacturers, according to officials of the firm from which the State Fair has purchased its fireworks. Billions of dollars worth of fireworks were used during the war, and many secrets unknown to the trade up to that time were revealed.

"If you want to hear a repeated chorus of Ah's and Oh's, pay a visit to the fireworks show at the coming State Fair", said one of the managers today; "We have found that fireworks pleases everyone. It is the one entertainment feature on the program that pleases father, mother, and the children, alike. The crowd never tires of anticipating what wonderful piece of fireworks will follow the one just displayed."

A crew of experts will be sent to prepare the set pieces and conduct each evening's fireworks program. Many of the "sets" and giant bombs to be exploded, are extremely dangerous for anyone but a trained person to handle. The entertainment and educational program of the fair is the greatest ever offered.

PLAN TO SPEND YOUR VACATION AT THE NEBRASKA STATE FAIR, WHERE EDUCATIONAL FEATURES AND RECREATION ARE PLEASANTLY COMBINED AND WELL WORTH WHILE.
